Research Associate

The Program on Integrative Knowledge and Human Flourishing at the Institute for Quantitative Social Science at Harvard University is seeking applications for a Research Associate. The Program on Integrative Knowledge and Human Flourishing seeks to carry out research and teaching to bridge the empirical social sciences with the humanities on topics related to human flourishing. Candidates should have, or expect to attain this academic year, a PhD in either the empirical social sciences or in philosophy or theology. Candidates with a PhD in the social sciences should have familiarity with and substantial coursework in philosophy and/or theology. Candidates with a PhD in philosophy or theology should have some familiarity with and some coursework in the social sciences and statistical methods. Responsibilities include independent research and scholarship; teaching of academic courses; coordination of courses, conferences, and workshops; and management of website, budget, and donor relations for the Program’s academic program. To apply, please email a CV and cover letter to Bonnie O’Brien at bobrien@iq.harvard.edu
